UNIONTOWN, March 23.—One man was killed and property to the extent of more than $100,000 was destroyed in a fire which threatened a business block in the heart of Uniontown today. The McClelland Hotel building will be a total loss.

Fireman Voight Laclair fell from the roof of the hotel building through three stories into the basement of the burning building. His body was recovered 30 minutes later and although a pulmotor was brought into use, efforts to revive life were futile.

The McClelland Hotel building was worth between $60,000 and $70,000, while the furnishings of the proprietor, H. McManus, were valued at $25,000. The stock of Scott's 5 and 10 cent store was worth $15,000.

Silverman Brothers store which is located in the skyscraper, adjoining the hotel, also suffered to the extent of about $40,000, chiefly from water. The fire originated in the Scott store which is in the McClelland Hotel building and spread rapidly. For a time the First National Bank building was threatened, but the only loss sustained there was from smoke. The H. Charles Hotel was also badly damaged from smoke and the guests were forced to vacate.

The fire started at 9:20 o'clock. When the firemen attacked the flames from the Peter street entrance of the store a draft was created which caused them to sweep through the entire structure.

Assistance was given the Uniontown firemen by the crews from Connettsville, Pa., and by the fire department of the city. The fire started in the Scott store which is in the McClelland Hotel building and spread rapidly. For a time the First National Bank building was threatened, but the only loss sustained there was from smoke. The H. Charles Hotel was also badly damaged from smoke and the guests were forced to vacate.

BERMIGILLO, Mexico, March 23.—Officers from the extreme front returned today after viewing some of the Federal fortifications through night glasses. They reported that the defenses were elaborate and laid out according to the latest approved methods, so that troops might move from trench to trench without exposing themselves.

Troops continued to pour into Bermigilillo from the north today. Nearly all the supplies from Yermo are now here.

PRESIDENT AT WHITE HOUSE*Mr. Wilson Entertains Sewickley Boy, Who Yearned for Chat With Chief Executive.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 23.—A pale smiling lad of 12 lay on a stretcher in the Blue Room of the White House early today and beside him sat the President of the United States. The scene was the culmination of weeks of yearning and the kind response of President Wilson to the little boy's plea.

Paralyzed in limb and life slowly

ebbing away, Harry Winthrop Davis of Sewickley, Pa., was the President's early caller. He came in a motor ambulance and three hospital attendants bore him into the White House to the Blue Room.

The President came and chatted for several minutes with the little fellow, whose eyes beamed with joy and who was at first too happy to speak. Finally he asked about Mrs. Wilson and left some flowers for her.

The President's eyes were dimmed

as he turned away to his day of work and the little boy was carried out on his stretcher to the ambulance and away to the railroad station and on to Atlantic City.

The visit to the President was arranged after Mrs. A. L. Davis, the boy's mother, had written Mrs. Wilson telling how her little boy had been paying to see the President, and how she vainly hoped it might be arranged. She suggested that the little fellow could be brought to the White House and the President promptly gave his consent.

NEW YORK, March 23.—Colonel

Theodore Roosevelt's family and friends were anxiously awaiting further advice today regarding the health of the party, it being known that the party was so far from being equipped in the rapid of a trans-

Atlantic trip.

While no concern, it was stated, was for the safety of the party, the President was desirous to learn just how and when the accident occurred and whether or not the expedition would be abandoned, especially as the party was so far from being

equipped in the rapid of a trans-

Atlantic trip.

The news of the mishap came in a brief message from Anthony Claiborne, a member of the party. It was dated at Sanatorium, Brazil, yesterday, and read:

"We have lost everything in the rapid. Telephone my wife of my safety."

By Associated Press.

ALTOONA, Pa., March 23.—A lone bandit today shot the cashier of the Union Bank of this city, wounded a depositor and got away in an automobile with about $500 of the bank's money.

A young man drove up to the bank in the central part of the city in an automobile and, entering, pointed a revolver at Mr. Burton, the teller and demanded the bank's money. Burton ducked behind the counter.

The stranger then over the ledge of the counter, vaulted over the iron screen and landed inside. The cashier, A. P. Turner, turned in his chair just as the robber fired a bullet striking him in the stomach. A bookkeeper and another employee, escaped through a door to the cellar

while the teller lay convulsed in a corner.

The robber proceeded to gather up a sackful of the loose bills he found on the counters. While he was doing this, a depositor, who had entered the bank to have a check cashed and as he was closing the front door the robber fired a bul-

Quarrel.

Quarrel.

Months of a feud dating back several years, among the Hughes and Roeluck families, residents of the mountain district in the vicinity of Dunbar, were aired Saturday afternoon before Alderman Eugene

Donovan of the West Side when

Henry Roeluck, father of the Roeluck family, was given a hearing on a charge of breaking up a school entertainment, disorderly conduct and molestation of a child.

Since the arrest of Roeluck several days ago, by Constable Joseph

O'Brien, the residents of the mountain district have been greatly excited over the trouble and at the hearing Saturday afternoon about fifty persons, many of whom were women, were present. Roeluck and J. P. Hughes are employed on the roads of Dunbar and it is said that Hughes had been hauling logs in that vicinity and had been in the habit of allowing the roads to be blocked with logs which had fallen off the wagons. It is said that Roeluck complained of the

matter and that the families were not

on the best of terms.

Friday night, a week ago, during the progress of a school entertainment at the Liston school, of which

Miss Myrtle White is teacher, it is said that Roeluck complained of the

matter and that the families were not

on the best of terms.

After hearing six witnesses for the prosecution, C. B. Hughes, president of the Dunbar township school board, and several for the defendant, the case was settled by the defendant paying the costs.

Aaron's Wonderfully Successful ANNIVERSARY SALE

Closes on Thursday, March 26

We regret to announce that this wonderfully successful Anniversary Sale will close on Thursday, March 26. In view of the magnificent responses from the entire surrounding country as well as the city of Connelleville, most any merchant would continue such a grand event but we are true to our word as well as to our purpose. When we say this sale ends on a certain day and date—it will end exactly at that time. But to make this ending a blaze of glory, we will add a series of inducements that should crowd this store to capacity during the last few remaining days of this matchless event.

Our Word of Thanks to the Public

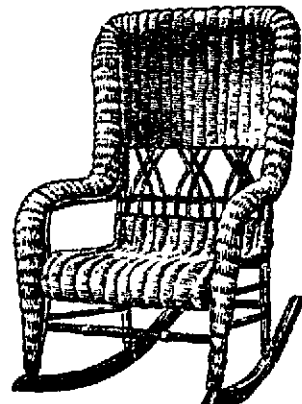

AARON'S
The Sign
of Quality.

We wish to extend our thanks to the public of Connelleville and surrounding country for the magnificent manner this sale has been attended. We believe, if such a thing could be done, a vote of thanks would come from the public to the management of Aaron's for the high class manner this event has been conducted, for the supreme values offered, for the precision and attention given every visitor, for the business like deliveries and credit extended. From the standpoint of new friendships, new acquaintances and added customers, this has been a brilliantly successful sale, even if we would have sold but one-half the amount of goods, as it is we have smashed all existing sales records so far and we expect to surpass even that before this sale closes on Thursday, March 26th. Before this event ends we want every person who has not attended to do so NOW. We want to show you WHY so many shrewd folks have been here and bought goods. We want to prove to you that Aaron advertising is HONEST, and that Aaron's MAKE GOOD every-thing claimed.

We want all to see the immense stock of brand new first Furniture, Carpet and Rugs direct from the most notable makers in America. We want all to view our new styles fully one and some two seasons ahead of anything shown in this section of the country. We want all to realize what matchless values we are giving, made possible by virtue of our tremendous three store buying power and outlet. We want all to understand how easily and pleasant it is to fit out the home with artistic new Furniture, new Carpets, new Rugs and save a generous percentage of the prices asked elsewhere. We want all to see how Aaron's make good their advertising claims. Particularly do we want you to see MORE than twice as many styles than shown anywhere else in this section of Pennsylvania. Credit too, is another feature we want to acquaint all with, Aaron credit. We will make the closing days of this sale, days that will be long remembered. Aaron's do things only one way, i. e. THE RIGHT WAY, to the fullest satisfaction of the people, to the lasting satisfaction of all concerned. Four days still remain. Apportion a time now, to come here with your wife, family, relatives or friends. Come, if only to get acquainted with the latest styles in fine Furniture, Carpets and Rugs and highest qualities, but COME. A warm genial AARON welcome awaits you.

THE CONFIDENT COKE TRADE.

The Connelville coke trade is holding its own with remarkable tenacity in spite of the fact that steel conditions are not so encouraging as they were at the opening of the year, and this fact moves the Cleveland Iron and Steel Trade to the following interesting observations:

"The Connelville coke market is firmer as to price at this time than it has been for many months. In fact, advances, slight in some cases, but still advances, are being marked up by various makers and buyers appear to be paying the new prices. Of course the volume of new buying at this time is not large, but it seems likely to continue growing from week to week since shipments are increasing and more coke ovens are being lighted. Connelville production for the last week aggregated over $50,000 tons, which was an increase of about 9,000 tons over the week of March 7. In the same week more than $50 ovens were lighted. All of which shows gradual recovery in taking place in the Connelville region, yet it is quite gradual. The Courier points out that the Producers have only 40% of their ovens in blast, thus showing that it was the Producers' operators who shut down their ovens rather than sell coke under $20 a ton. This same improvement is taking place in the Connelville coke regions, the merchant blast furnaces are adding a few more starks to the active list. However, the pig iron market is barely holding its own at most market centers. It is true, Buffalo markets have advanced all grades of iron about 50 cents a ton, and some eastern makers want 50 cents more for third quarter iron. But some slight concessions are being offered in Virginia Irons and not enough Southern Iron is being sold to afford a real test of the market. In view of the present condition of the pig iron market, it seems somewhat remarkable to find the Connelville coke market as strong as it is. The foundry coke market is firm, seeming even to be pegged at prevailing quotations. The tendency of the coke and the pig iron market just at this time, apparently, are as opposed as could be possible. Further analysis, however, would show perhaps, they are tending more toward the same goal than would appear on the surface."

There is nothing mysterious about the firmly-maintained prices of Connelville coke. They are due to the radiant determination of a considerable portion of the merchant interest not to sell their coke below the margin of actual profit. The increased demand for coke is due to the furnace themselves, when if they are barely holding their own seem to be holding it fast. The steel interest having its furnace with large stocks of coke taken from the Connelville yards, a fact which is without significance so far as known.

WRONG AGAIN.

The eminently Democratic but not always eminently correct Johnstown Democrat quotes Democratic history in the following reckless fashion: "It is good to remember that neither Snyder of the Connelville Courier approves of the Hon. Billy Brynder and of that eminent disciple of the politics, 'Billie's' friends of prominent Democratic harmony. Brother Snyder has always had a soft spot in his heart for the Democratic, the Irish and the Connelville, perhaps because he was that sort of Democrat himself before it occurred to him to turn Republican."

When by environment and inheritance of blood Brother Snyder was a Democrat, he had no doubts about portions of the Democratic faith, especially the Gospel of Free Trade. The Free Silver propaganda unleashed him as a Democrat. But he always admitted the faithfulness of the Old Guard which stood fast for the Democratic party in spite of its dubious nominees and its doubtful creeds. Loyalty to party was the first article of the Old Guard's political faith.

The Democratic organization of today which is trying to chase the Old Guard clear out of the Democratic country at the point of the bayonet was never like this. The Harford Boys have bolted the Democratic ticket in the past and Vance McCormick does not hesitate to say that they will bolt it again if it doesn't suit them.

It is the right of every man to identify himself with that party which represents most closely if not quite fully his views on questions of public policy, no matter how often he may leave one party for another; but it is bad faith and bad manners for party adherents to bolt their party tickets because of personal pique over the nomination.

The need of assistant assessors in Connelville, depends very much upon what the City Council intends to do about making an assessment under its own supervision. If such a valuation is made assistant assessors will be a useless extravagance.

The courts are not disposed to trust those thieves with parole sentences, possibly because they might ride away with 'em.

DEMOCRATIC EDITORS.

"The suggestion that Editor J. O'Donnell hasn't gotten the hang of writing Democratic editorials yet, provokes the following retort:

"Our esteemed contemporary forgets the fact that Editor J. O'Donnell for seven long years ran a Democratic paper in the evening and a Republican paper in the morning for the same people from the same plant."

What was Editor John Lester doing all this time, and by-the-way what is he doing now? Is this uncompromising Democratic editor ever to be called and never to be chosen?

GOOD HABITS.

The results of the safety first movement in coal mining cannot be judged by comparison of one year's accident record with another. Many accidents are unavoidable; that is, they are such that could not have been foreseen and guarded against; they are the Acts of God, to employ a legal term. But persistent observance of the rules of safety first must produce good results in the way of fewer accidents, and it will be found that the longer the rules are observed the easier their observance will become.

We are creatures of habit. The rules will become habitual.

The literary societies of the Dunbar township high school debated the question, "Resolved, That the coke industry is more beneficial than harmful to Fayette county." There wasn't much room for argument, of course, and yet a lot of Fayette county people who voted the Democratic party into power in 1912 were on the negative side of the debate.

The Owls have hitted from Connelville. Too many horned herds of storks and Elk working on the Owl schedule.

Egg stories are being hatched out.

England has a nasty rebellion on its hands. Ireland wants Home Rule and Ulster doesn't. The Catholic Irish want a Parliament all their own. The Protestant Irish prefer to remain in the London Parliament with a Protestant majority. If the object of the Government is to please everybody, why not let each section have its own way?

The city is full of ventilators that don't ventilate, and some of them are not boxed up.

Judge Dayton will not be impeached because he didn't happen to decide matters before him in the liking of the labor litigants. Here is an example of the wisdom of eliminating the judicial recall.

The license tax is a right not an equity.

Hotel hold-ups and mysterious disappearances are getting too common, and the army of unemployed whose recruits don't want work at any price is getting too large.

Public Sale of Real Estate.

TITLE UNDERSIGNED WILL OFFER at public sale, on the premises, on Tuesday, March 24, 1914, at 1 o'clock P. M.

The James F. Smith homestead consisting of about twelve and one-half acres of land, situated on the Uniontown and Connelville road about one mile west of the borough of Dunbar, Pa. There is a good seven room house, stable, milk house and other outbuildings on the premises, all in good repair. There is a well on the premises and it is piped for gas, and has water in the kitchen and basement. The farm is underlaid with the greatest vein of coal. There is a fine young bearing apple orchard and peach, cherry, quince and plum trees. It is close to school and good markets and is a splendid truck farm. It will make a pleasant summer home and is within easy reach of trains and street cars. Possession can be given at any time.

Terms of sale.—Ten per cent of the purchase money to be paid when the property is sold, balance to be paid within ten days after possession is given, and the remainder within one year from date of sale.

RICHARD MCGEE, WILLIAM C. SMITH, executors of Martha J. C. Smith, deceased, Dunbar, Pa. GEORGE ALLEN, Auctioneer. March 15-23

WEALTH

By GEORGE FITCH,
Author of "At Good Old Slawish."

Wealth is enough money to pay for necessities and a little besides. Still, wealth doesn't mean the same thing to all people. Every one has different necessities. Some men are rich if they can buy bread and shelter and have a little left for smoking tobacco. Others are poor because the man who sold them their new language kept coming around and turning them for a little on account.

Wealth depends a good deal upon the genius of the individual. Some families are so talented that they live well on $100 a month, pay a little on the home regularly and have $1.75 a week to blow in on luxuries and amusement. Other families spend $10,000 a year and then have to go to Europe in the summer with the tourists because they can't afford a yacht.

But wealth also consists not merely in having money, but in knowing how to spend it. Some of the most pitifully poverty-stricken men in the world are men who have been so busy hoarding up $100 bills that they haven't learned how to get rid of them effectively. Many a millionaire is sitting at home and twirling his bored thumbs from meal to meal because he is too old to work and never learned how to do anything else.

It is distressing to listen to tales of poverty by men who have to support families on nine dollars a week. But it is even more harrowing to listen to the mournful yells of families who earn $10,000 a year in New York and have it taken away from them without any casualties by the speculators.

ment horse owners, taxicab men and waiters in the ragtime restaurants. By the time one of these families has told a visitor how much it costs to live, he is ready to slip a quarter under the piano cover and steal away to weep over his sad lot.

"So busy cording up $100 bills that they haven't learned how to get rid of them effectively."

Most people try to get wealth by piling up more money. This can be done but it is risky because they usually pile up more necessities at the same time. The easiest road to wealth is to get a large pruning knife and cut off a few necessities such as automobiles, theatre suppers, fifteen-cent cigars and Paris hats.

Holding the Mirror to Prosperity's Face

That's what the advertising columns in this newspaper are doing every day in the year.

They reflect the business interests of this community and more and more are coming to reflect national activity. They tell you at a glance just what is actively seeking business and what the reasons are for expecting to get it.

They are the meeting place of buyer and seller. The interest they have to the reader is of an intensely practical nature. They not only give to readers information, but information of a helpful character which directly bears on their mode of living and frequently means a saving of time and money. See what the mirror reflects today—you will find something there that will interest you.

Special to The Courier.
SCOTSDALE, March 22.—More than $5,000 of the $12,000 furniture and maintenance fund for the new Y. M. C. A. building was reported secured, amidst cheers and hand-clapping, at the luncheon given in the association gymnasium Friday evening. The hands on the big clock erected on the corner of Pittsburg and Spring streets were whirled around that far. The big thing about it all was the campaign had not really started. For the subscriptions that evening were the team ones, no one having been solicited that going on today.

Rev. H. W. Miller, pastor of the United Presbyterian Church, said the grace before supper, and during the evening Dr. L. E. Runk and Rev. O. J. Howarth, both active workers, dropped in. The chairman of the divisions were called upon to have their capitals of their three teams report what they started with. Every report was greeted with cheering and much good natured rivalry was started up between the teams.

W. H. Glasgow, chairman of Division A, called his captains, H. D. Hoover, team No. 1, reported $155. His best being four $25 subscriptions; C. Lee Mellinger, team No. 2, reported $209, his best $100; and J. Schaffer, team No. 3, $270, his best $200.

Division B, chairman, George C. Jarrett, D. H. Bower, captain team No. 3, reported $171, his best $80; J. S. Johnston, captain team No. 4, $210, his best $100; P. E. Weddell, captain team No. 5, $200, his best $200.

Division C, J. T. Keithley, chairman; W. L. Davis, captain team No. 6, reported $230, his best $50; W. L. Schaffer, captain team No. 7, reported $125, his best $50; A. J. Skemp, captain team No. 8, $210, his best $80.

The executive committee reported $75, their best $40; making a total of $2,655, which with the $1,100 given Wednesday made $3,755, and as Secretary Howarth said, "With this campaign not yet begun."

W. E. Bower and F. M. Weddell's team each received the pennant with a great big "11" printed on it, and W. L. Davis' table was decorated with the Scotland pennant. The divisions were represented thus: Division A, $1,137; Division B, $231, and Division C, $482.

When things quieted down, C. Lee Mellinger, captain of team No. 2, of Division A, who had raised $200, verbally challenged J. S. Johnston, captain of team No. 4, of Division B, which had raised $210 by saying: "I just want to challenge this bunch. They managed to outstep out one more dollar than we did, we think tomorrow we can beat them." There was prolonged cheering from the other tables, and Captain Johnston answered: "You'll be getting it." Then he added: "We have to do it tomorrow, for we have some friends in the Old Country. We don't hear from them so soon as you do."

The conclusion of Saturday's solicitation, the first real day of the furniture and maintenance fund campaign of the Y. M. C. A., the big clock on Pittsburg street showed $2,156 of the $12,000 to be raised. The teams were represented as follows: H. D. Hoover, $155; C. Lee Mellinger, $209; W. F. Schaffer, $270; D. H. Bower, $171; J. S. Johnston, $210; P. E. Weddell, $200; W. L. Davis, $230; W. L. Schaffer, $125; and A. J. Skemp's team, $210. This gave the Scotland banner to Schaffer's team and the "11" banner to Mellinger and Weddell. The day showed $1,103 to Division A, $230 to Division B and $482 to Division C.

CONCERT TONIGHT.
This is the evening of the big concert by the Sunday school at the Presbyterian Church, under Jack Lewis, when about 300 adult and children's voices will join in song.

EVANGELISTIC MEETING.
The Presbyterian Church was packed Friday evening for the evangelistic meeting. It was Old Fellows night and the order filled many pews reserved in the center of the auditorium. Rev. H. S. Piper preached, Rev. J. E. Hutchinson presented the invitation, and Rev. W. J. Muir, who was among the Old Fellows and is one of the order, told how their principles had given him the first serious thoughts of the ministry as the full exemplification of the principles of friendship, love and truth. Jack Lewis and choir sang their best. Several cards of professional were signed.

LONDONDERY, RICH AND POWERFUL, BACKS ULSTER UNIONISTS.

BELFAST, Ireland, March 22.—The Marquis of Londonderry, who is an ardent backer of the Ulster Unionists, is one of the great noblemen of the United Kingdom. He owns over 50,000 acres and is a Knight of the Garter, and an aide-camp to the king. Tracing his descent from Sir Peter Tempest, who fought at Ashmole, through a family distinguished in English history, he has himself had an active official life. Outside the political career open almost as a matter of course to a man of his rank, he served for two years, from 1895 to 1897, as chairman of the school board of London. Before that he had been a member of Parliament for County Down from 1878 to 1881 and vicerey of Ireland from 1884 to 1885. Then in the British ministry, he held several offices, as postmaster general, president of the board of education and lord president of the council.

Cookery Notes

Careful Marketing.
The art of marketing properly is one which requires considerable study and skill, and the exact needs of the household should be ascertained to a nicety. There is no need to buy four herrings when three are ample, neither is it wise to buy perishable goods in large quantities.

Where one person has to plan the entire work of the household special care must be devoted to the marketing to allow sufficient time for the cooking and leave the mistress of the house leisure to attend to domestic matters. A list of the various meat, fish, vegetables, etc. which are in season each month should be kept handy, and when the housewife takes her walks abroad to do the required amount of shopping she will know exactly what can be found in the shops and by careful observation note where the best quality of goods can be obtained for the smallest possible expenditure.

Poor quality is never economical. Doughtful eggs are a most unsatisfactory investment. Far better pay a little more for a reliable article than make an unwise purchase. This same remark applies to fish, meat and vegetables.

All goods which deteriorate quickly should be renewed daily. Butter should be as pure as possible and after purchasing should be removed from the paper and kept in a cool larder till required.

The choice of eggs is always rather a precarious venture, one fairly reliable proof being that if the egg appears clear when held before a lighted candle it may generally be assumed that it is fresh.

Good Coffee.
An authority on culinary matters says that in making good coffee a great deal depends on the kind of coffee that is used. The price is not always to be depended on in ascertaining it. Some times better results may be obtained with a moderately priced coffee than with an expensive kind. The best plan is to experiment until you find a kind that is satisfactory and then stick to that and to the dealer who supplies it. The quality of coffee is often influenced by the way it is kept in the shop; also sometimes when out of one grade an unreliable grocer will substitute another and cheaper quality in the buying of coffee much depends on the good faith of the dealer.

A correspondent claims that she makes splendid coffee for breakfast in the following way. She uses a scant tablespoonful of coffee to a cup of water for each person. She puts it in the coffee pot with cold water in the evening before going to bed. In the morning she lets it boil for ten minutes, then sets it back on the stove and lets it simmer for another ten or fifteen minutes. In this way she extracts all the strength there is in the coffee.

An Administration Dainty.
The Charlotte russe being a favored dessert at the White House and grape juice in the menu of the secretary of state, it would seem that the grape juice Charlotte russe would be popular in administration circles. To make it take a quarter cupful of cold grape juice, one-half cupful of hot grape juice, one teaspoonful of gelatin, one-half cupful of sugar, one-half cupful of double cream, a white of one egg, one tablespoonful of lemon juice, lady fingers, candied violets. Soak the gelatin for five minutes in the one-quarter cupful of cold grape juice, then dissolve in the hot grape juice. Add the sugar and lemon juice and let stand till cold. Beat the white of egg stiffly and gradually beat the grape juice mixture into it. Beat till it will hold its shape, keeping in too water meanwhile. Line glasses with lady fingers and pour in the mixture. Decorate with the cream, beaten firm, and the candied violets.

Dutch Cabbage.
The good housewives of Holland are fond of cooking cabbage as follows: Take a small head of white cabbage cut in fine shreds, four fat apples peeled and sliced, one large tablespoonful of butter or drippings, a tablespoonful of salt, half a teaspoonful of pepper and a sprinkling of cheese or nutmeg. Stir over a slow fire for at least three hours. Mix together one tablespoonful of vinegar, a little flour (not more than a level teaspoonful) and a tablespoonful of jelly. Just before taking from the fire add this mixture to the cabbage. Let it boil up once or twice and serve.

Graquettes of Macaroni.
Boil one-quarter pound of macaroni in salted water until very tender. Drain and toss in saucepan with one tablespoonful of butter, half an ounce of Parmesan cheese, quarter of an ounce of cooked tongue cut in dice. Spread on a buttered platter, cover with buttered paper, press it well down and set away to cool. Divide with a knife into five parts, roll each one in grated cheese, then in beaten eggs and in cracker crumbs. Drain and serve on a folded napkin.

Baked Pumpkin.
Peel and cut some pumpkin into dice and stew until tender, but not soft. Drain and when cold place in a buttered baking dish, add half a cupful of sugar, a saltspoonful of salt and a tablespoonful of butter. Bake brown.

One Way to Cure "Nerves."
We remember hearing of an Englishman, a distinguished soldier, who was naturally a very nervous boy, but who had cured himself of the infirmity through reading Lever's novels. The manner in which Lever treats of all bodily ills is a kind of joke introduced him to a new philosophy that made any exaggeration of the advances of bodily safety seem not only morbid, but ridiculous.—London Spectator.

Distinction.
"Don't you believe women can keep a secret?"
"Of course they can keep a secret."
"Well, I'm glad one man will admit it."

Quite Natural.
Bertha—And do you really believe that a woman always turns to the last page first when she picks up a book?
Percy—Well, I have no reason to doubt it. I know it is the nature of the fair sex to want the last word.—London Telegraph.

KEPT HIS SECRET WELL.

Even Scott's Son Didn't Know Who Wrote the Waverley Novels.

A Scotch newspaper having referred to the old story that Walter Scott, son of the great novelist, had never read his father's novels, the Dunfermline Court Journal repeats a letter that first appeared in its columns on Sept. 17, 1858. It was signed "Veritas," and the writer says: "From 1810 to 1833 I resided in Edinburgh and was on intimate terms with Walter Scott. Sitting together one winter evening several years before his father made the famous declaration at the Chancery fund dinner held in the assembly rooms of Edinburgh that he was the author of the Waverley novels, I put the following questions to my friend: 'Do you not really and truly believe your father to be the author of the Waverley novels, or who do you suppose the author to be?' 'His answer was 'I have really no idea who the author is. If my father is the author he keeps the secret to himself, for none of the family knows and then he added, 'The moment a new novel (by the author of 'Waverley') is announced my father orders a copy from his bookshelf, and the whole family assembles in the parlor in the evening to hear the novel read by myself and my sisters, each taking a turn.' 'He further added, 'When anything very good or funny occurs in the reading of the novel my father joins most heartily in the laugh, perhaps more so than any of the family.'"

What one has that one ought to use, and whatever we take in hand we ought to do with all our might.—Cicero

Who Owned the Cart?

An old law in Carmarthen county, in Wales, required that every conveyance passing over the turnpike toll roads should be plainly marked with the name of the owner so that the perpetrator of any lawlessness could be easily detected.

One young farmer known as Stammering Jim was summoned before a magistrate, who demanded why his name did not appear on his two wheeled cart.

"W-w-whose n-name am I to put on?" stammered the defendant. "Your own, of course," said the magistrate.

"B-but it isn't my cart, your worship," says Jim.

"Who is the owner, then?" demanded the squire.

"I-I-I know the t-trouble, sir," said Jim. "The old sh-sh-shifts belong to D-D-David T-T-Thomas, the wh-wh-wheels b-b-belong to Hugh J-J-Jones, the old axle to W-W-William B-B-Bowser, the t-t-tailboard belongs to Josiah M-M-Morgan, the t-t-tailboard belongs to me. Then w-w-whose n-name am I to put on, sir?"—National Magazine

A "Place of Learning."
Sydney Smith, once being asked why a certain college was called a place of learning, replied that, although a great many had been there to receive learning, no one had ever taken learning away; hence it was quite appropriately named.

"I fell madly in love with him," she went on resolutely. "I dreamed of him. I could hardly wait for the time to come when I was to see him. He never came to the little apartment house I had told you about. I met him outside. One night he told me that he loved me, loved me passionately. I said that I would be his wife. Somehow it seemed to me that he regarded me very differently for a moment or two. He seemed to be surprised, uncertain. I remember that he laughed rather queerly. It did not occur to me to doubt him. One day he came for me, saying that he wanted me to see his little apartment house. He had taken, where we were to live after we were married. I went with him. He said that if I liked it, I could move in at once, but I would not consent to such an arrangement. For the first time I began to feel that everything was not as it should be. I remained in the apartment but a few minutes. The next day he came to me, greatly excited and more demonstrative than ever before, to say that he had arranged for a quiet, jolly little wedding up in the country. Strangely enough, I experienced a queer feeling that all was not as it should be, but his eagerness, his persistence dispelled the small doubt that had begun even then to shape itself. I consented to go with him on the next night to a little house in the country, where a college friend who was a minister of the gospel would meet us, driving over from his parish a few miles away. I said that I preferred to be married in a church. He laughed and said it could be arranged when we got to the inn and had talked it over with the minister. Still uneasy, I asked why it was necessary to employ secrecy. He told me that his family were in Europe and that he wanted to surprise them by giving them a daughter who was actually related to an English nobleman. This family had been urging him to marry a stupid but rich New York girl and he—oh, well, he uttered a great deal of nonsense about my beauty, my charm, and all that sort of thing."

She paused for a moment. No one spoke. Her audience of judges, with the exception of the elder Mrs. Wrاندall, watched her as if fascinated. Their faces were all turned toward her. With a perceptible effort, she resumed her story, narrating events that carried it to the hour when she walked into the little upstairs room at Burton's Inn with the man who was to be her husband. "I did not see the register at the time. I did not know till afterwards that we were not booked. Once upstairs, I refused to remove my hat or my veil or my coat until he brought his friend to me. He pretended to be very angry over his friend's failure to be there before he had promised. He ordered a supper served in the room. I did not eat anything. Somehow I was beginning to understand, vaguely of course, but surely and bitterly, Mr. Wrاندall. Suddenly he threw off the mask. "He coolly informed me that he knew the kind of a girl I was. I had been on the stage. He said it was no use trying to work the marriage game on him. He was too old a bird and too wise to fall for that. These were his words. I was horrified, stunned. When I began to cry out in my fury, he laughed at me but swore he would marry me even at that if it were not for the fact that he was already married. . . . I tried to leave the room. He held me. He kissed me a hundred times before I could break away. I tried to scream. . . . A little later on, when I was absolutely desperate, I— I snatched up the knife. He looked at me with a cold, steady eye. I struck at him. He fell back on the bed. . . . I stole out of the house—oh, hours and hours afterward it seemed to me. I cannot tell you how long I stood there watching him. I was crazed by fear. I— I— Redmond Wrاندall held up his hand.

"We will spare you the rest, Miss Castleton," he said, his voice hoarse and unnatural. "There is no need to say more."

"You—you understand? You do believe me?"

He looked down at his wife's bowed head, and received no sign from her; then at the white, drawn faces of his children. They met his gaze and he read something in their eyes.

"I—I think your story is so convincing that we— we could endure the shame of having it repeated to the world."

"I—I cannot ask you to forgive me, sir. I only ask you to believe me," she murmured brokenly. "I—I am sorry it had to be. God is my witness that there was no other way."

Mr. Carroll came to his feet. There were tears in his eyes.

"I think, Mr. Wrاندall, you will now appreciate my motives."

"Pardon me, Mr. Carroll, if I suggest that Miss Castleton does not require any defense at present," said Mr. Wrاندall stiffly. "Your motives judged. Judge me as I have judged you. I am not asking for mercy."

Hetty impulsively threw her arms about the rigid figure, and swept a pleading look from one to the other of the four stony-faced Wrاندalls.

They turned away without a word or a revealing look, and slowly moved off in the direction of the boudoir. They who remained behind stood still, motionless as statues. It was Vivian who opened the library door. She stepped down from the limousine and entered the building. A few moments later she walked briskly into the splendid offices of Wrاندall & Co., private bankers and steamship-owners, and stood before the door.

Half an hour passed. Then the door was opened and the tall old man advanced into the room.

"We have found against my son, Miss Castleton," he said, his lips twitching. "He is not here to speak for himself, but he has already been judged. We, his family, apologize to you for what you have suffered from the conduct of one of us. Not one but all of us believe the story you have told. It must never be retold. We ask this of all of you. It is not in our hearts to thank Sara for shielding you, for her hand is still raised against us. We are fair and just. If you had come to us on that wretched night and told the story of my son's infamy, we, the Wrاندalls, would have stood between you and the law. The law could not have touched you then; it shall not touch you now. Our verdict, if you choose to call it that, is sealed. No man shall ever hear from the lips of a Wrاندall the smallest part of what has transpired here tonight. Mr. Carroll, you were right. We thank you for the counsel that led this unhappy girl to place herself in our hands."

"Oh, God, I thank thee—I thank thee!" burst from the lips of Sara Wrاندall. She strained Hetty to her breast.

"It is not for us to judge you, Sara," said Redmond Wrاندall, speaking with difficulty. "You are your own judge, and a harsh one you will find yourself. As for ourselves, we can only look upon your unspokeable design as the work of a temporarily deranged mind. You could never have carried it out. You are an honest woman. At the last you would have revolted, even with victory assured. Perhaps Leslie is the only one who has a real grievance against you in this matter. I am convinced that he loved Miss Castleton deeply. The worst hurt is his, and he has been your most devoted advocate during all the years of bitterness that has existed between you and us. You thought to play him a foul trick. You could not have carried it to the end. We leave you to pass judgment on yourself."

"I have already done so, Mr. Wrاندall," said Sara. "Have I not accused myself before you? Have I not confessed to the only crime that has been committed? I am not proud of myself, sir."

"You have hated us well."

"And you have hated me. The crime you laid me guilty of was committed years ago. It was when I robbed you of your son. To this day I am the leper in your path. I may be forgiven for all else, but not for allowing Charles Wrاندall to become the husband of Sebastian Gooch's daughter. That is the unpardonable sin."

Mr. Wrاندall was silent for a moment.

"You still are Sebastian Gooch's daughter," he said distinctly. "You can never be anything else."

She paled. "This last transaction proves it, you would say?"

"This last transaction, yes."

She looked about her with troubled, questioning eyes.

"I—I wonder if that can be true," she murmured, rather pitiously. "Am I so different from the rest of you? Is the blood in blame?"

"Nonsense!" exclaimed Mr. Carroll nervously. "Don't be silly, Sara, my child. That is not what Mr. Wrاندall means."

Wrاندall turned his face away. "You loved as deeply as you hate, Sara," he said, with a curious twitching of his chin. "My son was your god. We are not insensible to that. Perhaps we have never realized until now the depth and breadth of your love for him. Love is a bitter judge of its own kind. It knows no mercy. It knows no reason. Hate may be conquered by love, but love cannot be conquered by hate. You had reason to hate my son. Instead you persisted in your love for him. We owe you something for that, Sara. We owe you a great deal more than I find myself able to express in words."

Leslie entered the room at this instant. He had his overcoat on and carried his gloves and hat in his hand.

"We are ready, father," he said thickly.

After a moment's hesitation, he crossed over to Hetty, who stood beside Sara.

"I—I can now understand why you refused to marry me, Miss Castleton," he said, in a queer, jerky manner. "Don't you let me say that I wish you all the happiness still to be found in this rather uneven world of ours?"

The crowning testimonial to an absolutely sincere apology!

CHAPTER XXII.

Renunciation.

On the third day after the singular trial of Hetty Castleton in Sara's library, young Mrs. Wrاندall's motor drove up in front of a lofty office building in lower Broadway. Its owner stepped down from the limousine and entered the building. A few moments later she walked briskly into the splendid offices of Wrاندall & Co., private bankers and steamship-owners, and stood before the door.

It was the first time she had been seen by the offices since the tragic evening when she had come to make her information desk, somewhat impressed by her beauty and the trim elegance of her long black broad-cloth coat, to say nothing of the dark eyes that shone through the narrow veil, forgot the dignity of the office and were so far as to politely ask her who she wanted to see and "what name, please."

The senior clerk rushed forward and transcribed the new boy with a glance.

"Now, Mrs. Wrاندall," he made haste to explain. "The new boy's surprise, the visitor was conducted with much bowing and scraping into the private offices, where no one ventured except by special edict of the powers."

"Who was it?" he asked, in some awe of a veteran, stern employer who came up and sneered at him.

"Mrs. Charles Wrاندall, your little simpliciton," said she, and for once he failed to snap back.

His slim fingers went searching for the end of his monstrosities.

"Why—why, about selling out to us," he stammered.

"I am willing to retire from the firm of Wrاندall & Co.," she said.

"Father says the business is as good as it was a year ago, but I don't agree with him," said the son, trying to look ludicrous.

"Then you don't care to repeat your original proposition?"

"Well, the way business has been falling off—"

"Perhaps you would prefer to sell out to me," she remarked quietly.

"Not at all," he said quickly, with a surprised glance at his father. "We couldn't think of letting the business pass out of the Wrاندall name."

"You forget that my name is Wrاندall," she rejoined. "There would be no occasion to change the firm's name, merely its membership."

"By Jove, Sara," burst out Leslie abruptly. "I wish you'd let me have that Gipsy Mab picture. I've always been dotty over it, don't you know? Rippling study."

Her lip curled slightly.

"As a matter of fact," he explained conclusively, "Chal often said he'd leave it to me when he died. In a joking way, of course, but I'm sure he meant it."

"You may have it, Leslie," she said slowly. "It is doubtful if he correctly interpreted the movement of her head as she uttered the words."

"Thanks," said he. "I'll hang it in my den, if you don't object."

"We shall expect Mr. Carroll tomorrow, Sara," said his father, with an air of finality. "Good-bye. May I ask what plans you are making for the winter?"

"They are very indefinite."

"I say, Sara, why don't you get married?" asked Leslie, surveying the Gipsy Mab photograph with undiminished admiration as he held it at arm's length. "Rippling! This to the picture."

She paused near the door to stare at him for a moment, unutterable scorn in her eyes.

"I've had a notion you were pretty keen about Brandy Booth," he went on amiably.

She caught her breath. "There was an instant's hesitation on her part before she replied."

"You have never been very smart at making love guesses, Leslie," she said. "It's a trick you haven't acquired."

He laughed uncomfortably. "Next stroke, then?"

Following her late the corridor outside the offices, he pushed the elevator bell for her.

"I meant what I said, Sara," he remarked, somewhat doggedly. "You ought to get married. Chal didn't leave much for you to cherish. There's girl with wonderful eyes, carrying a monkey in a crude wooden cage strapped to her back. On closer observation one would have noticed the peculiarly expressive features in the face of the girl, and then one would have noticed the caption written in red ink at the bottom of the photograph: "The Trumbull's Fancy Dress Ball, January 10, '07. Sara as Gipsy Mab."

With a start, Sara came out of her painful reverie. She passed her hand over her eyes, and seemed thereby to put the polite senior clerk back into the picture once more.

"No, thank you. Is Mr. Redmond Wrاندall down this afternoon?"

"He came in not ten minutes ago, Mr. Leslie," said the clerk, looking at her. "I shall call Mr. Wrاندall if you wish to see him."

"You may tell him that I am here, if you please," she said.

"I am very sorry about the ink wells, madam," murmured the clerk. "We were not expecting—"

"Pity don't let it disturb you, Mr. Bancroft. I shall not use them today."

"They will be properly filled by tomorrow."

"Thank you."

He disappeared. She relaxed in the comfortable old leather-cushioned chair, and closed her eyes. There was a sharp little line between them, but it was hidden by the veil.

The door opened slowly and Redmond Wrاندall came into the room. She arose at once.

"You loved as deeply as you hate, Sara," he said, perplexed and ill-at-ease. He stopped just inside the door he had been careful to close behind him, and did not offer her his hand.

"I came down to attend to some business, Mr. Wrاندall," she said. "Business," he repeated, staring.

She took note of the tired, haggard look in his eyes, and the tightly compressed lips.

"I intend to dispose of my entire interest in Wrاندall & Co.," she announced calmly.

"I don't quite feel up to—"

She stepped forward, plainly startled by the declaration.

"What's this?" he demanded sharply.

"We may as well speak plainly, Mr. Wrاندall," she said. "You do not care to have me remain a member of the firm, do you? I blame you for feeling as you do about it. A year ago you offered to buy me out—or off, as I took it to be at the time. I had reason then for not selling out to you. Today I am ready either to buy or to sell."

"You—you amazed me," he exclaimed.

"Does your offer of last December still stand?"

"I—I think we would better have Leslie in, Sara. This is most unexpected. I don't quite feel up to—"

"Have Leslie in by all means," she said, resuming her seat.

He hesitated a moment, opened his Sara smiled.

Many minutes passed before the two Wrاندalls put in an appearance. She understood the delay. They were telephoning to certain legal advisers.

"What's this I hear, Sara?" demanded Leslie, extending his hand after a second's hesitation.

She shook hands with him, not listlessly but with the vigor born of nervousness.

"I don't know what you've heard," she said pointedly.

His slim fingers went searching for the end of his monstrosities.

her in an aggrieved way for a moment.

"I have no real feeling of hostility toward you, Sara," said Leslie nervously. "In spite of all that you said the other night."

"If I am afraid you don't mean that, deep down in your heart, Leslie," she said with a queer little smile.

"But I do," he protested. "Hang it all, we—we live in a glass house ourselves, Sara. I dare say, in a way, I was quite as unpleasant as the rest of the family. You see, we just can't help being snobs. It's in us, that's all there is to it."

Mr. Wrاندall looked up from the floor, his gaze having dropped at the first outburst from his son's lips.

"We—no, we prefer to be friendly, Sara. If you will allow us—"

She laughed and the old gentleman stopped in the middle of his sentence.

"We can't be friends, Mr. Wrاندall," she said, suddenly serious. "The pretence would be a mockery. We are all better off if we follow our paths, our interests to diverge today."

"Perhaps you are right," said he, compressing his lips.

"I believe that Vivian and I could—but no! I won't go so far as to say that either. There is something genuine about her. Strange to say, I have never disliked her."

"If you had made the slightest effort to like us, no doubt we could have—"

"My dear Mr. Wrاندall," she interrupted quickly, "I credit you with the desire to be fair and just to me. You have tried to like me. You have even deceived yourself at times. I—but why these gentle recriminations? We merely prolong an unfortunate contact between antagonistic natures, with no hope of genuine peace being established. I do not regret that I am your daughter-in-law, nor do I believe that you would regret it if I had not been the daughter of Sebastian Gooch."

"Your father was as little impressed with my son as I was with his daughter," said Redmond Wrاندall drily. "I am forced to confess that the better the judge. We had the better of the bargain."

"I believe you mean it, Mr. Wrاندall," she said, a note of gratitude in her voice. "Good-bye, Mr. Carroll. I shall see you tomorrow." She glanced quickly about the room. "I shall send for—"

With a quaint little smile, she indicated the two photographs of herself (Wrاندall put in an appearance. She understood the delay. They were telephoning to certain legal advisers.

no reason why you should go on like this, living alone and all that sort of thing. You're young and beautiful and—"

"Oh, thank you, Leslie," she cried out sharply.

"You see, it's going to be this way: Hetty will probably marry Booth. That's an old. I take it. You're depending on her for companionship. Well, she'll quit you cold after she's married. She will—"

She interrupted him peremptorily. "If Charles did nothing else for me, Leslie, he at least gave me you to cherish. Once more, good-bye."

The elevator stopped for her. He stroked back to his office with a puzzled frown on his face. She certainly was inexplicable!

The angry red faded from her cheeks as she sped homeward in the automobile. Her thoughts were no longer of Leslie but of another. . . . She sighed and closed her eyes, and her cheeks were pale.

Workmen from a picture dealer's establishment were engaged in hanging a full length portrait in the long living-room of her apartment when she reached home. She had sent to the country for Booth's picture of Hetty, and was having it hung in a conspicuous place.

Passing the open library door, Sara paused for an instant to peer within. Then she went on down the hall to her own sitting-room. The canary was singing glibly in his cage by the window-side.

She throw aside her furs, and, without removing her hat, passed into the bed-chamber at the left of the cozy little boudoir. This was Hetty's room. Her own was directly opposite. On the girl's dressing-table, leaning against the broad, low mirror, stood the unframed photograph of a man.

With a furtive glance over her shoulder, Sara crossed to the table and took up the picture in her gloved hand. For a long time she stood there gazing into the frank, good-looking face of Brandon Booth. She breathed faster; her hand shook; her eyes were strained as if by an inward suggestion of pain.

She shook her head slowly, as if in final renunciation of a secret hope or the banishment of an unwelcome desire, and resolutely replaced the photograph. Her lips were almost white as she turned away and re-entered the room beyond.

"He belongs to her," she said, unconsciously speaking aloud; "and he is like all men. She must not be unhappy."

Presently she entered the library. She had exchanged her tailor-suit for a dainty house-gown. Hetty was still seated in the big lounging chair, before the snapping fire, apparently not having moved since she looked in on passing a quarter of an hour before.

One of the girl's legs was curled up under her, the other swung loose; an elbow rested on the arm of the chair, and her cheek was in her hand.

Coming softly up from behind, Sara leaned over the back of the chair and put her hands under her friend's chin, tenderly, lovingly. Hetty started and shivered.

"Oh, Sara, how cold your hands are!"

She grasped them in her own and fondly stroked them, as if to restore warmth to the long, slim fingers which gave the lie to Mrs. Coburn's declarations.

"Because I Love You So Deeply," Said Sara.

"I've been thinking all morning of what you and Brandon proposed to me last night," said Sara, looking straight over the girl's head, the dark, languorous, mysterious glow filling her eyes. "It is good of you both to want me, but—"

"Now don't say 'but,' Sara," cried Hetty. "We mean it, and you must let us have our way."

"It would be splendid to be near you all the time, dear; it would be wonderful to live with you, as you so generously propose, but I cannot do it. I must decline."

"And may I ask why you decline to live with me?" demanded Hetty resentfully.

"Because I love you so deeply," said Sara.

The Best Story Randall Parrish Ever Wrote

That's what everyone thinks of this great, historical romance—

The Maid of the Forest

You know that Mr. Parrish has written some of the biggest successes ever published. There's action in every line he writes. Intense interest, excitement, and an absorbing love theme are irresistibly combined. In this new story he is at his best.

INEXPENSIVE CROCK.

This little crock may be developed for early spring wear in any of the light weight, woven materials or cotton fabrics. The blouse hints of the Paul Poiret design and has a wide sleeve of lace. A tunic which may be banded with contrasting silk or striped material falls over a plain undershirt. Black satin is used for the folded skirt and piped the short lace sleeves. This frock would be pretty developed in stiffer material, with sleeves of net and bias band on the tunic.

THIS TUESDAY, AND FOR A WHILE, IT STAGES

An Easter Toggery Show

New Silks; New Silks Specially Priced. Embroideries, Laces, Other Trimmings, Trimming Buttons, Ribbons, Neckwear, Gloves, Delicate Perfumes, Etc.; Silk Hosiery, Fine Handkerchiefs, French Jewelry Fancies; Belts, Girdles, Hand Bags and other necessary adjuncts to an Elegant Toilette.

Trimmings, Buttons & Trimming Braids

A resume of the new Trimmings introduced this season brings into prominence—

Broad Trimmings—Made into ornaments, Garnitures and Trimmings by the yard, some of the latter in styles that permit of their being separated and used singly.

Silk Trimmings—Pendant ornaments, Buckles and Tassels, which enhance as greatly the beauty of evening gowns.

Silk Trimmings—Pendant ornaments and separate ornaments, in all styles and sizes.

Buttons—Variety unlimited.

—A second "opening," as it were; an elaborate Fashion Show—an introductory display of lovely things, far from common: be they ever so staple, singled out from among many for your pleasure and benefit.

—We want you to come and view it; it is worth-while. Connellsville's store of finest weaves and small wares promises a beauty feast for eyes that want to see new ideas and new loveliness beyond the best efforts put forth by other stores.

—This high-class merchandise is style-supreme; much of it will be seen nowhere in town but here.

—This show is an opportunity to make choice of exclusive, one-of-a-kind things—things overlooked during the formal "opening." Certain stuffs chosen by you is yours emphatically and not to be duplicated in stock.

Easter is April twelfth. If there's gowns and garnitures to be made: small "fixings" to be selected: elaborate creations to be planned.

You've No Time to Lose in Stores of Limited Choice

The Loveliest Laces

Fashion has entirely forsaken the heavier laces formerly in vogue, and now evinces a strong preference for Shadow Laces—fine, sheer and delicate. Fine Nets are also favored, especially for the new tunics and draperies. Venice Edges show a new departure in that they incline more to sheerness and their two-tone effects. Some of the new Venice Laces are almost as delicate as Shadow Laces. Narrow Laces for frills are among the season's favorites, as are also Maline Laces, their ochre color heightened by silk threads. Beaded Net Flouncings, Chiffon Edgings and Flouncings, Embroidered Allovers for yokes, Black Laces and the new Net Top Laces, all enjoy a place of honor in the display.

Newest Embroideries

The word Embroideries means so much more than in former years! Not alone do we show new Trimming Embroideries in great variety—chiefly in matched sets—but Allovers and wide Flouncings in wondrously wrought designs. Combination Embroideries—crepe and plaid, ratine and crepe, ratine designs on plaid voile, crepe voile with large embroidered flowers inset with very sheer pink or blue organdie. Flouncings of voile combined with flat Venice in designs indescribably lovely.

Laces and Embroideries Price Reduced

GROUP ONE.
Excellent quality linen Trench lace in a variety of pretty designs. Undervalued at 50c a yard.

GROUP TWO.
Shadow lace edges and bands, 2 to 6 inches wide. A collection of stray ends and whole bolts, specially priced 12½c a yard.

GROUP THREE.
Cluny lace edges and bands—white and ecru. A sturdy weave in constant demand. Newly priced, 39c yard.

GROUP FOUR.
Cambrie embroidery edges, 15 inches wide. Eyelet designs rule the collection—there being fewer other effects, 29c yard.

GROUP FIVE.
This is a gathering of the much asked for Camille shadow lace, 18 inches wide and re-priced 50c a yard.

Easter Silks

Gleaming, radiantly beautiful textures, plain, multi-colored and quaintly flowered. All of the softest weaves and in tints so wonderful and rich that they seem to have been taken from the canvasses of the old master painters.

Tuesday, the rare silks hold court in the Dry Goods Store. Your only ambassador need be an eye for the beautiful and real feminine appreciation of our translation of Fashion's edict.

A Season of Ribbons Loveliest Styles Here

Wonderful colors and color-combinations, some in the rich dark Oriental effects, but principally in gay stripes, plaids and floral designs usher in the new season. Wide Gold Ribbons, with Roman stripes in vivid colors, head the novelties, and look best when made up into fashionable girdles. Others are in new and fascinating variations of such well-known Ribbons as Jacquards, Persians, Velvet Brocades, Fullers, Moires and plain gold Gause Ribbon.

Hat Bows, in plaids, Roman stripes, black moire, colored satin, and including also the new pastel bows. Various, 25c to $1.50 the yard.
